INTRODUCTION TO THE TOWN

The Town of Cheverly, Maryland, is a welcoming community of 6,400 residents in a 1.2 square mile area. The community is located near Washington, D.C. in Prince George's County at the intersection of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, MD50, and MD202. The Cheverly METRO station provides a quick link to Washington and other parts of the region.

Cheverly is a diverse community. The community regards its diversity as a core strength and is dedicated to increasing access and inclusion. The Cheverly Police Department's role is to assist in maintaining a safe community while reflecting these values, and in a manner that engages community, builds trust and reflects the best of community-oriented policing practices. Out of recognition that police acting as an arm of federal immigration-related agencies can run counter to the goals of community safety and trust in policing, the Town enacted an ordinance in 2018 to prohibit the department from inquiring about the immigration status of individuals with whom officers come into contact.
